Bald Spot Sports Buys Out Founder

Indianapolis, Indiana – May 2008 – Bald Spot Sports, LLC, [BSS] has purchased the ownership shares of founder Glen Macdonald as part of its ongoing strategy to continue growing the business. The company has experienced significant sales and distribution growth since opening the garage door in 2003, work preventing Macdonald from focusing on his passion to craft race seats.

Cameron Cobb, business development manager with Createc Corporation, has assumed the management of operations. Cobb said, “After working with Glen for five years to represent the interests of Createc Corporation’s technology alliance with Bald Spot to the various sanctioning organizations, it was only natural for me to assume a leadership role and continue shepherding some of the new products in development. Glen will be missed for his superior craftsmanship and passion for the sport, and we hope he will continue to make seats on contract with Bald Spot whenever possible.”

BSS manufactures two custom seat products to absorb impact forces before they act on the body of a race car driver during a collision. Seats are manufactured using technology exclusive to BSS and molded from two new specialty foams, Creafoam™ and Creasorb™, provided to BSS for race car seat production by Createc Corporation.

As part of the move, BSS intends to expand its licensing of the Creasorb™ foam seats, which have greater elasticity, absorb impact and return to the initial shape with greater integrity. Cobb added, “Thanks to this move, we are now in a position to scan an original seat crafted by any partner and reproduce it out of our technically superior foam.

Areas can be carved out of the neck and back areas of the elastic seat to create room for foam stability plugs to be inserted. The Creafoam™ plugs, when inserted, are designed to offer maximum stability and force deadening during a single impact. These seats can offer greater support for the driver during secondary impacts continuing to act on the car after the primary collision.
